COOLIDGE SEEKS NAVAL CURTAILMENT

AMERICA, ENGLAND, JAPAN TO HOLD MARINE POWER SESSION

'Tis a Maneuver To Force the Recalcitrant Nations, Italy and France, To Join In General Parley At Geneva and Limit Building of Submarines, Cruisers and Destroyers--Definite Proposals Have Been Made By the United States.

President Coolidge is negotiating with Great Britain and Japan for a three-power naval treaty to limit submarines, destroyers, fast cruisers and other ships of war left untouched by the last Washington conference it was announced at the White House Tuesday.

Undaunted by the refusal of France and Italy to enter a five-power agreement for naval curtailment, the Coolidge administration has been conducting "informal inquiries" with both Great Britain and Japan, the nations with whom America is bound in the five-five-three ratio pact.

The responses from the two naval powers are understood to be favorable so far.

The situation among the three countries is being studied carefully to determine whether or not any fruitful disarmament results could be achieved even if France and Italy stay out, it was said.

If it appears to be feasible, the United States, Great Britain and Japan will put their feet under the same conference table at Geneva this month during the concurrent sessions of the League of Nations general disarmament parley.

Despite President Coolidge's well-known desire to strip the world of what he regards to be the expense and menace of naval armaments, his determination to arrange a three-power pact stuck official Washington with surprise.

The purpose of President Coolidge's latest move, it is believed, is to maneuver France and Italy onto the conference. He is understood to believe that France is responsible for the hopeless deadlock to which the Geneva arms parley is headed. She has refused to ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt pact.

What is regarded in official administration circles to be France's "obduracy" is believed to have kept the United States out of the World Court.

France and Italy probably will be invited to send observers.

The Washington government probably will not attempt to present any limitation formula in its invitation to Great Britain and Japan. The whole question of what steps are possible to the three major naval powers to curb their own building programs reluctance to join in five-power negotiations almost certainly will be left to the Geneva meeting itself.

It Great Britain accepts, as London advices indicate, the greatest stumbling block in the road of the three-power discussion will be removed.

Heretofore Great Britain frequently has indicated that she could accept no limitation of antisubmarine craft if her continental neighbors refused to limit submarine construction.

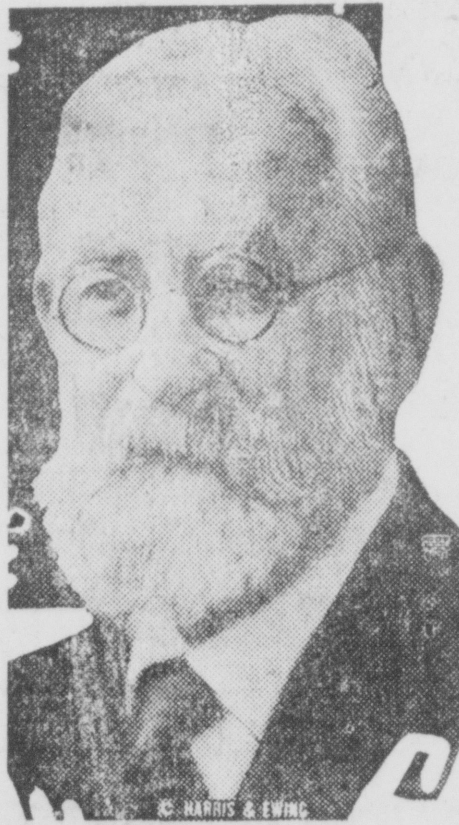

Japan's only question is accepting the five-power plan was as to extension of the 5-5-3 ratio to other than capital ships and airplane carriers. The American invitation said the United States was disposed to follow that course, but the Washington government clearly has indicated its recognition at even the extension of maximum tonnage limitations by classes of ships to type not provided for in the Washington treaty must be a flexible agreement.

Officials believe the proposed conference would evolve a plan to set tonnage limitation for cruisers, destroyers and submarines at a maximum figure, but with a requirement for reexamination of these figures at intervals with a view to revision upward if naval building outside the treaty group of powers makes that expedient.

HERBERT STUMP DEAD.

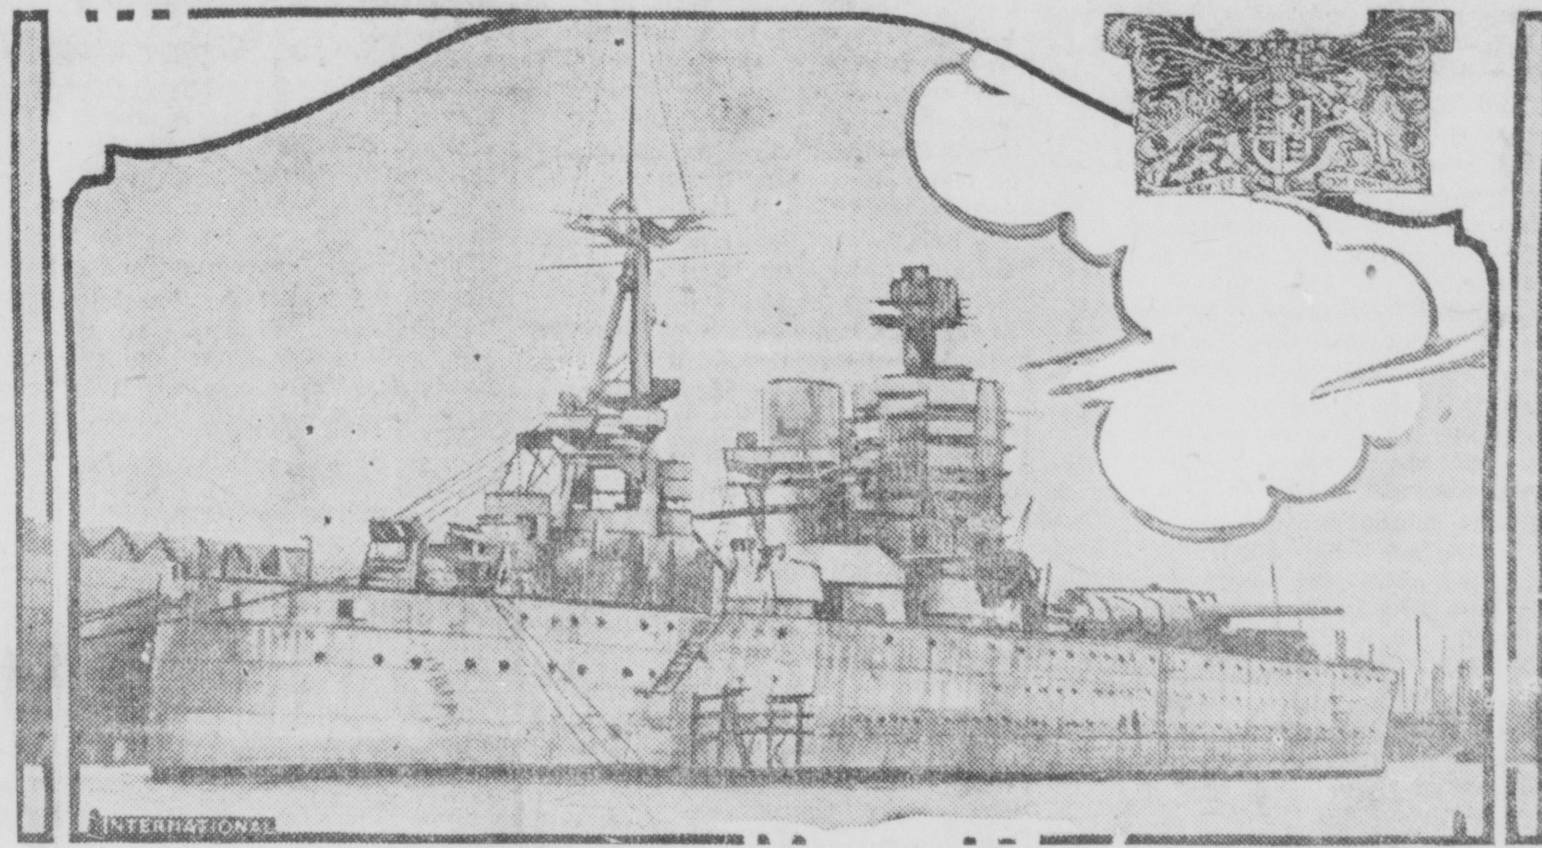

Herbert Stump died at the home of his parents, Ira and Lucy Moyer Stump at Tarlton, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The boy was 12 years of age. His death was due to perniciou anemia resulting from Bright's disease. Besides his parents, he is survived by one brother, Harold Stump.

The funeral services will be held at the Presbyterian church, Tarlton, Friday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will be in the Stoutsville cemetery.

"Seedy" Looking Man

The term "seedy" as applied to a person who is somewhat shabby really refers to a plant, the appearance of which is somewhat disorderly owing to the fact that it has gone to seed when all the strength has been exhausted in the process of seed development. The term "seedy" is especially applied to one whose clothing is unorderly and soiled and whose hair may be in need of brushing or cutting.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Marion—In a final effort to find the body of Carlson Virdon, 18, business college student, who is believed to have ended his life in Crystal lake near Marion December 2, professional diver has been employed to explore the bottom of the lake.

Virdon disappeared under mysterious circumstances the night of December 1. The following day his automobile was found with a note hinting at suicide was found on the edge of the lake. Police and fireman dragged the lake for two weeks without finding a trace of the body.

Columbus—A man believed responsible for the fire which Tuesday claimed the lives of two persons and destroyed an apartment house was under observation by operatives of the State Fire Marshal's department, it was announced by the fire department Wednesday.

Columbus—A series of burglaries and safe crackings in Canal Winchester near here in the last two months, was cleared up today, police said, with the alleged confession of Russell Barnett, 26, a lineman. Barnett confessed Chief of Detectives Schellebarger said to looting six stores.

Mt. Vernon—Herbert Andreas, 20, was burned to death and three automobiles were destroyed in a fire which destroyed a garage today. Andreas' body was found under a door in the ruins of the garage. He was employed at night.

Cleveland—An attempted jail break was frustrated and three prisoners in the county jail were held under guard as a result of finding keys fashioned from spoons and other implements in the prisoner's cells.

ATTENDED CEREMONIES

Miss Flora Dunlap and Mrs. E. F. Anderson attended the cornerstone laying ceremonies of the Women's club, corner of Front and Town streets in Columbus Wednesday. Miss Edith McClure Patterson of Dayton, made an address. The Monday club of this city received an invitation to attend.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEETING.

Fifty-eight men gathered at the chamber of commerce rooms Tuesday evening to hear Dr. J. B. May make an address before a joint meeting of the chamber of commerce and the Pickaway County Medical Society.

The doctor's talk was interesting. He spoke on the intestinal tract and the conditions that arises when disease attack this portion of your digestive machinery. He also spoke of the new society, The Health and Educational society of New York City. Dr. May said that after a person reaches the age of forty, they ought to have sense enough to get along without a doctor. Every person ought to study their own self sufficiently to know what their body needs, without consulting a doctor every time they have an ache or pain.

THOUSANDS RUSHING TO A NEW GOLD CAMP

Scenes of '49 Reenacted, Desert Rats, Half Breeds, Wild Women in the Rush.

Once more Nevada is in the grip of a gold rush. Whether or not it will produce the glamor and the treasure of old California, the Comstock, the Klondike or Goldfield remains to be seen. It got off a whooping start and is gathering momentum every hour.

One flank of it has lashed against Tonopah, filling the street with automobiles of every make, streaked with alkali dust. A mixed breed of men mill thru the hotel lobbies at Tonopah Nevada, hurrying clerks in white collars, big-hatted and booted prospectors with square jaws, the slim, trim gen try of the gaming table. Camp followers, overornate, bland, are there, too, in force.

The Malapai, as the Indians call the "bad lands" of the lower Nevada desert, again is witnessing the rush of man, mule, truck and motor car aping toward the staked lands of Weepah, 40 miles away, where Frank Horton, who lost a fortune as a low-grade orem man at Goldfield and won it back again, has come upon "dirt" that assays thousands of dollars to the ton. His son, a bronzed desert prospector, despite his youth, made the find. He kept his own counsel, but the news leaked out and the rush was on.

The Malapai has been the setting for hectic gold rushes, but the Weepah boom bids fair to be the greatest of them all. Horton, overnight, finds himself to be famous. Before setting out from his hotel for his claim at Weepah, Horton displayed hundreds of telegrams, all of them asking for a concession on the Weepah claims and many offering large sums of money.

One message, from a New York manufacturer, was worthy of note:

"If you are the Frank Horton I know, you can have all the money you want."

The manufacturer was one of those who paid a million for Horton's Daisy Mine in Goldfield, and never realized a cent on the investment.

"That man is sincere, I know," Horton said, "but I do not think I will have to call on him."

Then in retrospect the old prospector said, "When I was starving and had a low grade mine for sale, I could not get one single engineer to say a good word for the property."

The new and old mix incongruously in this rush into the sage lands. The prospector's mule brays at the trim sport roadster automobile, both loaded down with bulging grubsacks. Trucks carrying household goods towering over the drivers' heads.

Many of the roads have to be broken thru by the wagons, the trucks and the motor cars, as worked roads are few and far between. But it is a clear field and a straight shoot from Tonopah, last outfitting station to Weepah where the gold and the glamour and the excitement await.

Has a Long Snout

The opossum is the only marsupial found in the United States. The long, hairless, prehensile tail, the naked ears, piglike snout, and the long, coarse hair, together with the widely spread toes, are the chief distinguishing marks, says Nature Magazine. These animals love the vicinity of water and are most numerous in swamps and bottom land bordering streams. The average length is about thirty inches.

Migration of Gulls

According to F. C. Lincoln of the United States biological survey, young herring gulls do not all migrate southward in the fall as most birds are generally supposed to do. It has been learned by putting bands on the young of the herring gulls that when fall comes the birds migrate toward every point of the compass. When it comes to avoiding capture, says the biologist, the gull is much shrewder than such birds as the crow.

Farm Woodlot Made to Return Profit

Certain Trees of Low Value Should Be Cut.

Harvest time in the farm woodlot is here. Winter is the logical time for the farmer to cut his fuel, fence posts and such timber as he may need, says F. G. Wilson, extension forester at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. "Weeding" the woodlot should be practiced when the wood is harvested. Certain trees, such as scarlet and black oaks, ironwood, red maple and pin cherry, have such a low value that they should be considered as weeds. Cutting them for fuel and permitting other and more valuable trees to grow in their place is advised by the forester.

The farm woodlot may be made to yield a profit if given proper care, he states. For best results the woodlot must not be grazed and it should be protected from fires as much as possible. Unsound and badly formed trees should be removed and used as fuel. Overmature trees have reached or passed the point of greatest value and should be cut and disposed of to the best advantage, either as timber or fuel.

Another advantage of removing trees of inferior varieties is to prevent them from seeding in the openings. Where young growth is lacking, seedlings of valuable species such as walnut, black cherry, red oak, white oak, ash, basswood and pine may be placed in the vacant areas of these varieties seeded there.

Trees which are standing too thickly will grow spindly and many will die and decay. Thinning them, saving the best, should result in more timber of a much higher quality. Waste land, of which there is some on most farms, can be profitably utilized if timber is grown on it and given the proper care, in the opinion of the specialist.

Sweet Clover Harmful in the Alfalfa Fields

Farmers who wish to sell a good quality of alfalfa seed cannot afford to allow sweet clover plants to remain in the crop. A few hours or days spent in removing these plants will be well repaid in the price received for alfalfa seed. The plants can be pulled or cut below the surface of the ground. Most buyers of seed object to the presence of sweet clover in alfalfa and a small amount of it may result in rejected shipments, loss of sales and various items of expense.

Buyers of certified seed expect to receive good seed and not a mixture. Sweet clover is a hindrance to the production of superior alfalfa seed. Through the extensive planting of sweet clover the seeds have become very general in the ground and it has become increasingly difficult to grow alfalfa without some sweet clover appearing in the seed crop either from volunteer plants in the field or from handling the alfalfa after sweet clover.

Facts for Poultrymen Found in Experiments

Extensive investigations in breeding and feeding of poultry were carried on by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, during the last fiscal year, according to a report of the chief of that bureau. In experiments with Rhode Island Reds and Single Comb White Leghorns for increased egg production, there was a higher proportion of 200-egg records than during any previous year.

Other experiments with poultry involved chick mortality, hatchability and fertility of eggs, inheritance of egg production, and various experiments in feeding for egg production. In feeding tests for egg production, it was found that omitting limestone, a shell-forming ingredient, from the ration, reduced egg production 50 per cent.

Soy Beans Are Better Protein Feed Than Corn

It is usually a good practice to sow soy beans with corn when the corn is to be hogged off, because the bean supply is a better protein feed than corn, and for this reason the soys are worth more than the corn they displace in the crop. From a soil fertility standpoint the beans would not have a high value, though there might be some. It depends on conditions a good deal. On very poor land or land very low in nitrogen and humus, the soys would have more value; but on good corn land which will grow 40 to 50 bushels of corn per acre, the beans would be the most likely to have derived about all the nitrogen they contain from the soil, and hence there would not be any new supply of nitrogen added to the soil.

High-Yielding Pear Tree

The Bartlett pear produces most of its fruit on spurs which ordinarily live for many years. One of the requisites of a high yielding pear tree is that it have an abundance of vigorous spurs well distributed over the tree. The pruning should be of such a nature as to avoid shading the spurs by dense foliage; to keep the fruiting wood in a healthy, vigorous condition; and to provide new spurs to replace the old and weak spurs, as well as those which are injured or broken off during harvest.

DRIVERS SHOULD FACE HARD TEST

Reasons Why States Should Enact and Enforce the Chauffeurs' Act.

Ten salient reasons why every state in the Union should enact and enforce the uniform motor vehicle operators' and chauffeurs' act recommended by the Hoover conference, are presented by the National Safety council, which points out:

1. The large number of automobile accidents that take such a huge toll of lives, limbs and property, should be reduced, following passage of the model law urged by the Second National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Decrease Accidents.

2. There should be a marked decrease in the number of drunken drivers as motorists who persist in mixing gas and booze will have their licenses revoked, which is not possible in many states which do not issue such permits.

3. Speeders will slow up when going through residential districts, where children play in the streets, if they know their licenses are in danger of being canceled.

4. Habitually careless operators of motor vehicles, who are constantly involved in crashes, will be more cautious and courteous once they face the prospect of losing their licenses.

5. Permits to drive will not be granted to applicants who are physically unfit, by reason of being subject to fits, fainting spells, defective vision or hearing, etc.

6. Licenses will not be granted to persons who are mentally deficient. Today it is possible in some states for the insane to operate cars.

Bar Aliens.

7. Foreigners who cannot read or speak English will have to learn the meaning of the rules of the road, read traffic signs, understand traffic signals, etc.

8. Boys and girls under sixteen years of age will not be able to get a license. Minors will not be allowed to operate taxicabs, jitneys, busses, etc.

9. Tourists who desire to spend more than a month in some other state will not have to take out an additional license, as there are liberal nonresident privileges in the proposed law.

10. The new act should result in motorists being afraid to speed away after being in an accident, because they will realize that, if apprehended, they will lose their licenses and face the possibility of both a fine and a jail sentence.

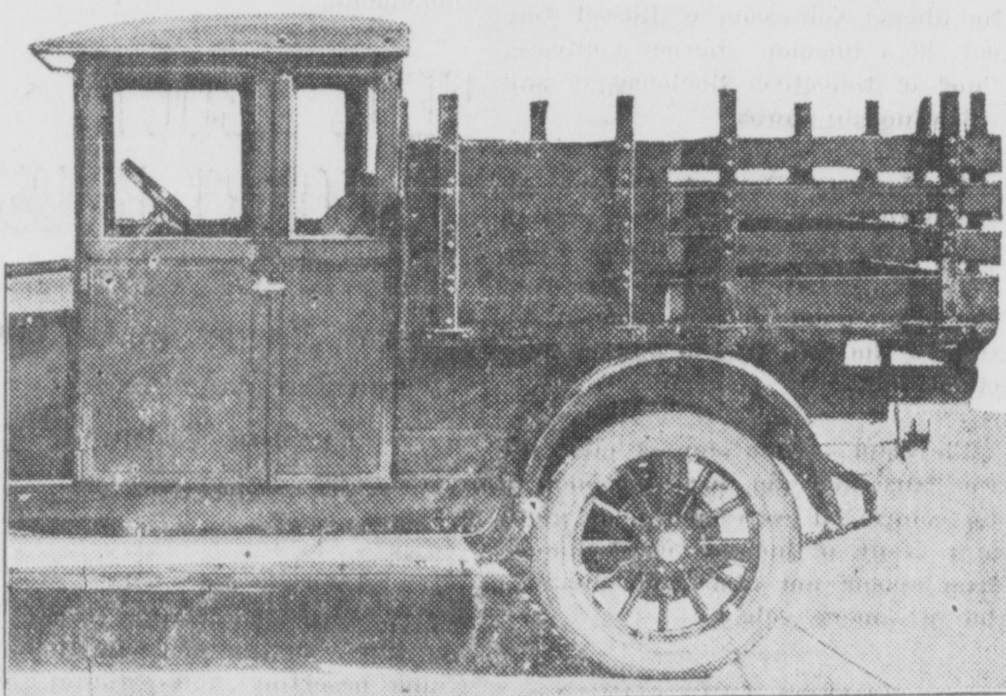

Highway Courtesy Quite Necessary for Safety

If motorists will adhere to the simplest form of highway courtesy a smoother flow of traffic can be easily effected, according to Matt F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, who, in a statement enunciated a simple form of highway courtesy as follows.

"Highway courtesy consists in giving precise and intelligent signals to indicate clearly every intended change of course while driving, whether it is to be a right turn, left turn or a full stop."

In this connection Morse points out that "one of the fundamentals of traffic safety is the signal system devised so that one driver may apprise all others of his intentions. To reduce the number of accidents on American streets and highways it is essential that each driver pay 100 per cent attention to the fundamental principle. There is a crying need for a general adherence to this signal system by motorists."

RAILROADS USING TRUCKS AND BUSES

Motor Trucks Are Being Used to Supplement Regular Railroad Service.

A paragraph on "Motor Transport" in the annual report of the secretary of commerce of the United States contains some interesting figures on the use of trucks and busses in connection with other forms of transportation. Mr. Hoover says:

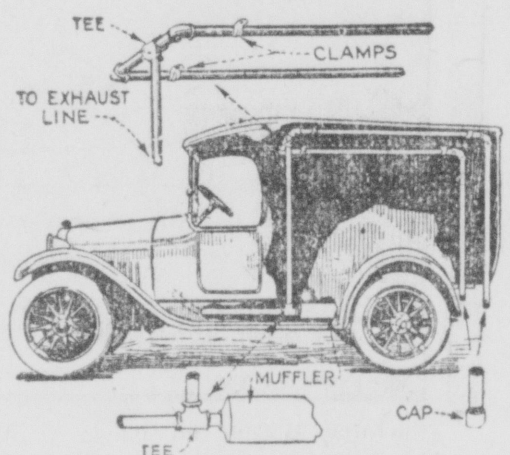

"An outstanding development of the year is the increasing use of the motor truck and motor bus in conjunction with other forms of transportation. Transportation experts are beginning to comprehend the possibilities of the motor vehicles as a co-operative instead of a competitive factor. Over 50 railroads in the United States and Canada are now using motor trucks to supplement their shipping service; nearly as many more are availing themselves of the motor bus. Quite a number of railroads are experimenting with store-door delivery, some 30 or more use the truck in terminal operation and several have now replaced their way freight trains with the motor truck. One of our largest railroads has replaced local freight trains on 1,000 miles of line and is serving 500 stations with the motor truck. Furthermore, over 14,000 miles of motor bus routes are operated by electric railways. Developments such as these warrant increasing attention to the possibilities of the use of the motor vehicle as an adjunct to other forms of transportation."

Some Fast Americans Get Enough at Times

Now and then the American tourist abroad bumps into a surprise, as was well illustrated in the case of a man from the States who called up a friend near London and was invited to spend a week-end at the latter's country estate. The car that came to the hotel for the American was a $17,500 roadster with a straight-eight power plant. On the way out the owner mentioned that the car was good for tremendous speed and started to give a demonstration. The American, bored and tired, cried enough when the speedometer reached 85. The regular speed of the car seemed to be around 80.

Heating Delivery Truck During Winter Months

During the winter months the groceryman, milkman and others, who must deliver their products some distance, will find a heater within the car of great advantage. Commercial exhaust heaters cost from $15 to $25, including the installation, and a serviceable heater can be made at much less expense. Remove the exhaust line and muffler from the car and insert a tee between the forward end of the muffler and the end of the exhaust line.

Homemade Pipe Heater for Delivery Trucks Which Is Attached to the Exhaust Pipe.

haust line, employing 1½ inch pipe fittings. Then screw a vertical section into the tee fitting and insulate the lower section of this where it comes in contact with the wood. Place a tee fitting at the top of this vertical pipe and run two branches, as shown, through the truck body. Run two lengths down with their ends just projecting through the floor of the car.

During the summer months the ends of the pipes are closed with pipe caps, but in the winter these ends are left open so that the exhaust gases will circulate around the car.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Severe Punishment for Receiving Stolen Cars

Teeth will be injected into the federal law to punish interstate transportation of stolen automobiles, if the house passes a measure already approved by the senate. It would reach unscrupulous dealers who act as "fences" to dispose of stolen cars. The new act provides a penalty of $5,000 fine and five years in prison for interstate transportation of stolen property. The bill is so worded that the same penalty is imposed on persons who receive such stolen and transported property and those who "receive, conceal, store, barter, sell or dispose of" such property, knowing it to be stolen.

It is further provided that the punishment may be meted out in any state through which the stolen property is transported.

The national motor vehicle theft act is commonly known as the Dyer law.

THE HANDS

Need More Care Than Face, Says Expert.

One may rejuvenate a neglected face, but the years cannot be "lifted" off the hands, pointed out Eileen Bourne, beauty expert, in an article in this week's Liberty. "The skin on the hands," she explains, "is subject to far more punishment than the skin on the face, and more preservative treatment of them is required to prolong their youthful texture."

"The natural lubricating oil that keeps skin on both face and hands young, soft and pliable," Miss Bourne continues, "is removed from the hands by soap and water. The hands have to be washed, of course, but when washing avoid the extremes of hot and cold water and let the water keep running the dirt through the drain. Tepid water is best for the hands. When drying them, pat rather than pull on the skin, for the pulling wrinkles it."

"Large, dilated veins should be treated by massage, the operation being performed preferably with the hands raised over the head. Witch Hazel should follow the massage."

KILLS UNWED DAUGHTER

Red Bank, N. J., March 7.—Mrs. Christine Stavole, mother of 10 children, today shot and killed her 15-year-old daughter Rose, when she discovered the unwed girl, cowering in the basement of her home with a new-born child. The mother then begged police to kill her. The baby was dead when found by police. Mrs. Stavole is charged with murder.

"Fur" From Sheep

Karakul is the fur of sheep known as karakul. The karakul sheep takes its name from Kara Kul (Black lake), a village in the eastern Vokhara, a province of central Asia. The fur is taken from the young karakul lambs when they are but a few days old, as the character of the curls deteriorates with age. The skins of prematurely born lambs have value as fur, but the ewes are not sacrificed to secure them.

Fashion Dictates Simple Lingerie

Even French Things Display Conservative Tendency in Dainty Apparel.

The importance which attaches to the fashions in lingerie is one of the features of the present season. In outer dress ensemble, harmony, color have been made definite and conspicuous, so that now a critical sense and considerable imagination are required to direct the making or the assembling of a wardrobe. Lingerie, boudoir dress and all of the more intimate accessories that have been relatively minor matters in other days, with no other requisite than the daintiness and fine quality that belong to a woman of fashion and good taste, have assumed new significance, asserts a fashion writer in the New York Times. Some women have a fondness for nice lingerie that leads them to care for it almost more than they care for gowns and hats. Women plunge into extravagance for fine, pretty underthings when it involves a sacrifice and perhaps strict economy in the rest of the costume.

The surprise in the new collections is the lingerie being received from Paris. Frothy, frilly styles have so long been attributed to the Parisians that the more substantial and altogether practical undergarments designed by the French for this season are being incredulously received. Materials are heavier, and more silk and crepe are shown than chiffon and voile and the filmy stuffs that have been used for several seasons. There are clever combinations of material in which the more delicate are combined with the substantial or added as trimming, giving a dainty finish to the garment. Chemises and step-ins are made with soft washable satin, silk or crepe, with panels or sections of chiffon or georgette set in, the two fabrics being joined with fagoting in floss. Georgette is used as panels, platted godets, ruffles and bands, sometimes in the same color, often in another shade or a contrasting color.

A compromise between the plainer models in lingerie and the extremely fancy is illustrated in an entirely new design. It is a chemise of ivory crepe de chine, the border of which is embroidered in a slender leaf pattern forming an uneven edge. The effect is that of painting in a light green tint finely outlined with gilt. This is done with highly lustrous floss and is charming. Green is used also on pale yellow and on mauve and the same design forms the finishing edge, most striking in effect done in black and silver floss on a white crepe step-in.

One new and exceedingly interesting point in the French designs as well as in the American is the fitted shoulder which has superseded the ribbon strap. The ribbon support which has so long been accepted has come to be seen as a bit of a nuisance, always involving perplexing problems of adjustment of color and inventive ways of fastening. At last the chemises, step-ins, brassieres or whatever are cut with the upper part in one piece, fitting over the shoulder to the enhanced comfort of the wearer.

In any event the tendency is toward a more practical mode in designing lingerie, worked out skillfully and daintily. Lace in most models is the answer, for a yoke and fitted shoulder pieces of fine lace need no apology in either day-time lingerie or that for evening wear, and many novelties are being shown both in the style of lace and in the manner of its use.

Power Sent Over Ocean

A circular bank of high power vacuum tubes, capable of delivering 2,000,000 watts of power, is the final amplifier through which the voice of a person telephoning by wireless from New York is forced through the ether over the Atlantic to London. The coils encircling the base of the bank carry gallons of ice-cold water to the base of the tubes, thereby preventing tubes from melting under the tremendous heat they generate.

Photographing Martians

It is possible that the question whether Mars has an atmosphere akin to our own and whether the planet is inhabited may be settled by color photography. According to a member of the Yerkes observatory staff, pictures taken by the use of colored light rays, notably the long "infra-reds, penetrate the atmosphere surrounding the planet and produce a much better picture than when ordinary light is used."

Guncotton From Garbage

Kurt Gerson, an engineer of Berlin, Germany, has developed a process of manufacturing guncotton or artificial silk from the garbage of great cities. It is done, he says, by sifting and subjecting all the cellulose ingredients to a special treatment. By distilling the remaining refuse, such as potato peelings and pieces of wood, he claims to produce tar, charcoal and acetic acid.

SMOOTH FORGER RUN TO EARTH IN THIS CITY

J. I. Tobey, of Iron River, Michigan, Passes Forged Checks on Merchants.

J. I. Tobey, a smooth stranger, about 45 years of age and well dressed, was in the city Tuesday and played the merchants to fare-you-well, by passing forged checks, some of which bore the name of C. E. Morris, a farmer living east of this city.

Among the places visited were Betz's restaurant where he secured $15; H. M. Parrett's clothing store, $12; Fickardt & Company's drug store $12, and the Crist Department store where he purchased a lady's coat for $19.75 leaving a check for $20 to cover same.

When Wallace Crist, who was a former bank cashier at the First National bank, saw the check, he saw at once that it was a forged piece of paper and instituted a search for the customer and he was placed under arrest. The stranger happened into the place of Harry Hill, the implement dealer secured some U. S. mail lying on the office desk and opened them, the letters contained negotiable notes.

At the Second National bank he saw C. E. Morris write out a check and from this source, picked up some blank checks and started out on his rounds to have them cashed with Mr. Morris' name signed to same.

The stranger is being held for investigation. No charge has yet been placed against him.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

A very pleasant surprise was given Mrs. Henry Imler at her home in Stoutsville Monday evening, it being her birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in music and games. Delicious refreshments were served at a late hour and all departed wishing Mrs. Imler many more happy birthday anniversaries.

Mrs. James Wolfe, of Tarlton, celebrated her seventy-second birthday anniversary with a family dinner at her home on Reading street. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe are very active at their age, Mr. Wolfe being 79 years of age. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Delno Randolph Wolfe and son, Edward, Mrs. John Daughterman, Miss Mary Barton, all of Lancaster; Mr. Lawrence Waldo Wolfe, Mrs. Hazel Hartranft and sons, James and Marvin, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Shaeffer and Miss Mary Manahan, of Tarlton. Mrs. Wolfe was presented with a birthday cake by Miss Manahan with 72 candles. The cake was 18 inches in diameter. All departed wishing Mrs. Wolfe many more happy birthday anniversaries.

HARTMAN THEATER.

The run of the book and now the run of the play has extended from the Atlantic as far west as the Pacific coast so "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is well known the country over to book lovers and playgoers alike. The local presentation with a New York company selected by Edgar Selwyn, the producer, will be made at the Hartman theater, Monday evening, March 7 with engagement being for the first half of the week only with matinee on Wednesday.

Of the play, it is said that not often a book, even with the sensational popularity of the gay story by Anita Loos, ever quite stepped out of its book covers into the footlights with such perfect fidelity to itself as does the delightful story of Lorelei and Dorothy of here and there on the gold digging road of their adventures.

But "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" embraces from all accounts the strange difficulties of the theater with as much abandon and emotional excitement as Lorelei does her rich friends. And it is declared, further, that the almost inspiring cleverness, a kind of intuition coupled with undeniable knowledge, has given a synthetic blend to the characters of the book and the players provided, to bring them out of the amusing leaves into pulsing life of actual impersonation.

Successful runs in Chicago, New York, and along the Pacific coast have brought "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" well to the fore among the best plays to see, and so one may expect that the performances will be rewarded by large attendance.

The principal players in a company numbering 21 are John Marion, Mary Ricard, William Courneen, Herbert Standing, Lois Arnold, Ada Sinclair, Edouard LaRoche, Josephine Morse, Martin Wolfson, Jay Roed, Lonna Mariclo, Fred Backus, Gene Paul and Fred Monti.

"The Poor Nut" with Elliott Nugent as its start, blazes its triumphant way back for a return engagement of three night and Saturday matinee at the Hartman theater, beginning Thursday evening, March 10. This twinkling comedy, as you may know, presents the gayer side of college life, centered around fraternity and relay-racing high lights at Ohio State university, of which Mr. Nugent is an alumnus. The cast and production which graced the New York and Chicago stages thru "The Poor Nut's" amazing Metropolitan runs, again come to the Hartman, intact.

In the second act of "The Poor Nut" the audience witnesses a relay-race between Ohio State and Wisconsin, staged with such deft perfection as to have evoked high praise from critics in both Chicago and New York. It has been compared, in point of tenacity and thrilling power, to the famous chariot race in "Ben Hurr." The "Poor Nut" of the play, acted by young Mr. Nugent, is a studious, bespectacled youth who suddenly attempts to make himself a heroic figure, thru athletics, before the eyes of a new flapper queen whom he secretly adores. The result of this precarious twist in an ordinarily, peaceful life, is shown with hilarious results in the course of the three acts of the play.

Elliott Nugent wrote "The Poor Nut" in collaboration with his father, J. C. Nugent, with whom he has written other highly successful Broadway plays including "Kempy" which scored a long Metropolitan run. "The Poor Nut" is presented by Patterson McNutt, now a New York theatrical producer, and formerly a Columbus boy. Thus, an Ohio play, by an Ohio author, staged by an Ohio producer, and with an Ohio star, will make the latter half of this (coming) week at the Hartman a gala occasion. Acting in Mr. Nugent's support are the same Broadway favorites who appeared with him earlier this season, including Norma Lee, Percy Helton, Betty Garde, Larry Fletcher, Cornelius Roddy, Frazier Coulter, Beach Cooke, Eric Kalhurst, Harry Gresham and Robert Scott.

There will be a special Student's matinee on Friday at 3 p. m. with special rates to students. Another matinee on Saturday.

C. S. GUSMAN IS CHAIRMAN FOR PICKAWAY

Training Camps to be Held at Places--Young Men are Asked to Enlist.

The appointment of Captain C. S. Gusman, 423 South Scioto street, as chairman of Pickaway county for the Citizens' Military Training camps, was announced in Cincinnati recently by Mr. Albert H. Morrill, civilian aide to the secretary of war for Ohio.

Patriotic citizens thruout the corps area each year volunteer for this service, Mr. Morrill said in pointing out that appointments have been made in 90% of the corps area's three hundred and fifty-five counties.

With approximately 95% of his county chairmen appointed so far, Mr. Morrill expressed optimism for a whirlwind campaign this year. Ohio's quota has been set at 2,200.

Captain Gusman will appoint a group of local chairmen to assist him in the enrollment of young men between the ages of 17 and 24, who are of average intelligence, good moral character and physically fit.

Three camps will again be held in this corps area. Camp Knox and Fort Thomas, Kentucky, will open July 2, continuing to the 31st while Fort Ben jamin Harrison, Indiana, will operate from June to July 19. The government provides free railroad fare to and from camp, medical and dental attention, food, shelter, uniforms and athletic equipment.

NO ATTENTION WILL BE PAID EASTERN TIME

By Farmers, Will Work by Sun Time Despite Adoption by the Entire State.

Farmers of Ohio will continue to run their farms by the sun, regardless of Eastern time, according to L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation.

The Abele Eastern time bill, signed by Governor Donahey Monday, will be effective early in June and will advance the state's time an hour. It will be the means of avoiding much inconvenience in cities and villages in a narrow strip down the western edge of the state which were left in a central time region when the interstate commerce commission recently extended the Eastern time zone west in Ohio as far as the Baltimore and Ohio rail road line from Cincinnati to Toledo.

Sun time, which was about 30 minutes faster than central time, will be about 30 minutes behind Eastern time.

The Eastern time law will not greatly affect farmers except in inconveniencing them in some of their dealings with labor, Mr. Pamler said and also in dealing with trading centers.

"The greatest inconvenience to the farmer in the present change is in dealing with labor during the busy seasons of the year," Mr. Palmer said. "During haying and harvest, particularly, field work cannot be done to advantage until the dew is off. This means the field work starts late, and the laborers from nearby cities expect to quit work in the middle of the afternoon."

CUT POOR FIGURE IN HIS NIGHTSHIRT

In "Bill Nye: His Own Life Story,"

Frank Wilson Nye tells the following: Before Nye left the Boomerang some admirers, after spending the evening together, stopped at his home on their way home at about 1 a. m. to tell him what a genius he was. The house was in darkness and every one in it sound asleep. That made no difference. They knocked on the door and tried to find a key in which to sing "Auld Lang Syne."

Being suddenly awakened, Bill failed to recognize his friends' voices and demanded, "Who's there?" They apologized and assured him they hated to disturb him, but inasmuch as he might not live till morning they must let him know without relay that he was a genius.

And one of them added as he turned to go: "I don't care how much of a genius a man is, he looks like the devil in his nightshirt."

RY US FOR A WANT AD

He Chose the Other Girl

By H. IRVING KING
(Copyright.)
KITTIE CHAMBERS was a dream of loveliness that night. She had clear, pinkish-white skin, rosy lips and cheeks. No make-up. Kittie scorned rouge and lipsticks. She could afford to, and nature, the good, old hairdresser, was responsible for her "permanent wave." John Milford thought she was the prettiest animated thing he had ever seen in his life—and for once John was right.

He had come to see her on this pleasant summer evening with the intention of asking Kittie to be his wife and had every reason to believe that she would embrace the proposition—and him. The act he contemplated was no hasty one; the way had been prepared, Kittie and John had moved forward in their courtship on well-considered and thoughtfully laid-out lines, understood the situation thoroughly and had arrived at the point where it only needed a word or two from John to complete the performance. This was the night when, logically, he should speak those few words. He intended to speak them and Kittie expected that he would.

Milford was a young doctor rapidly accumulating a fashionable practice. He had some little money and his family was away up. To be connected with the Milfords was an honor which many sought and few obtained. Kittie's family were only so-so socially, but they had "oodles" of money. The match was a most suitable one in every way.

It is true there was a certain Martha Colgate in the background; and from present appearances in the background she seemed likely to remain. In the first place—and the last place—Martha's people had no money—at least as money goes in these days. Socially they didn't even belong to the Country club, keeping mostly to themselves in the old house where they had lived for generations before Colgate's corners became Woodedge and a "select" rural community.

Martha was pretty in her quiet way. She and John had been friends since childhood. Perhaps, at times Martha had dreamed dreams and perhaps John had, too; but if so dreams they still remained. John prided himself upon being a practical man, John did; and boasted that he never acted upon impulse.

The expected surely would have happened if Kittie hadn't talked too much. Kittie felt so sure of John that she thought she could afford to be a little catfish. He was going to propose that night—and she was going to accept him. But, conscious of her own beauty, she thought she would give him a little walk-around first. She knew how intimate had been the friendship for years between Martha and John and, for want of a better theme to stir up John, pitched upon Martha.

"I saw that frowsy little friend Martha of yours yesterday when I was downtown," she remarked after they had been talking less than five minutes. "What a dowdy."

"Martha is not frowsy, and she is not a dowdy, as you call it," perked up John. "She does not dress extravagantly, or in the very latest mode, perhaps; but she is a neat, well dressed and sensible girl."

Kittie gasped a little at the spirit with which John had replied to her remarks.

"Oh, indeed," she replied, "I didn't know. I am wrong, of course. But I don't think you are much of a judge of women's dress anyway, dear—or you would have admired my frock before this. What do you think of me, anyway—John, critic and judge?" She was ready to switch the conversation.

But John, once having Martha thrust upon him—just at the time when he did not want to think of her, too—was not so easily turned.

He had a sort of rush of Martha to the brain and began discoursing upon her many and varied perfections until Kittie could stand it no longer, lost all control of herself and, stamping her little foot, cried out: "Since you know this paragon so well, why do you waste time around here? Why don't you go to her?"

"Thank you," said John, "I believe I will." And, seizing his hat, he went.

"Where's Martha?" he asked of Martha's mother as he burst into the Colgate house.

"She's—she's—our girl left suddenly today; and Martha is out in the kitchen mixing bread!" said Mrs. Colgate.

Out to the kitchen John rushed and, seizing Martha around the waist, kissed her.

"You stop, John Milford," cried Martha threatening him with a fistful of dough. "If you don't I'll—I'll tell Kittie Chambers."

"I wish you would," returned John. "Meantime I'll tell you something. Go on with your mixing." And drawing up a chair he sat down and did tell her something—the whole story. You know the rest, of course. John and Martha were married and Kittie was as mad as a batter—and married an Italian count. John still boasts that he never in his life acted simply upon impulse. And Martha believes him. Their marriage, she says, was the result of John's careful reconsideration of his entanglement with Kittie Chambers.

WESTINGHOUSE TO ADVERTISE IN NEWSPAPERS

Big Firm Has Studied Problem For Many Years and Has Reached Decision.

A change in the advertising policy of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, of Pittsburgh, whereby its advertising appropriation will be expended almost entirely in newspaper space was announced recently by J. C. McQuiston, manager of publicity, to go into effect April 1.

The decision is a pioneering step in the use of newspaper space by an electrical apparatus manufacturer of the importance of the Westinghouse company, since its products range from domestic electrical appliances to monster electric locomotives and huge generation station units.

"Newspapers," Mr. McQuiston said, "seem to offer the only medium by which we can both 'nationalize' and 'localize' our various sales campaigns, thus permitting us to conduct a nation-wide campaign on products and at the same time vary our program to fit the needs of specific districts."

"For many years we have been users of a considerable amount of newspaper space for certain of our merchandising lines and the results so obtained have prompted us to expand this advertising to cover all of the many lines in which the company is interested."

"Our decision to concentrate on newspaper space came after a careful study of all factors entering into the marketing, selling and advertising situation. One important item was flexibility, whereby we could vary our plans to conform to various factors, such as weather conditions and peculiarities in the economic situation with respect to any particular district of the country."

"Certain cities present a greater industrial market opportunity than others. Others are outstanding in the character and extent of their new building operations. In still others a greater market is offered for certain products in our merchandising lines than others."

"The flexibility of newspaper space will permit us to cover all such points with advertising of a specific character."

Heretofore, the company has expended its newspaper appropriation primarily to advertise electric products used in the home. The new plans however, in addition to appliance advertising include advertising of street lighting equipment, industrial and commercial motors, radio apparatus, farm lighting equipment, electric meters and other measuring devices, and institutional advertising concerned with public relations of utilities, generating stations, factories and personnel.

The Westinghouse Co., began advertising to the general public in 1886 and is one of the pioneer manufacturers to adopt and maintain advertising of this nature.

Seeks to Test Ability to Learn While Asleep

Can learning be acquired during one's sleep? Prof. W. T. Heron of the psychology department of the University of Minnesota is trying to find out. He has, very considerably, selected himself for the experiment. The psychologist has connected a telephone and an electrically driven phonograph so that sounds are conveyed to his ears by headphones. It is so arranged that when he releases his grip on the switch, which happens when he falls asleep, the phonograph starts very softly. "Whenever I awaken, the renewal of the grip on the switch will immediately stop the machine," says Professor Heron. "In this way I will be sure that I will not hear the material in the waking state. It does not seem to be beyond the realm of possibility that the human being may learn, at least to some extent, while asleep."

So He Could Not

Heard on a street car:

"Hello, John."

The person addressed looked surprised and said, "Well, hello, but I'm not John."

"That's funny. You look just like a friend of mine, named John. Your hat is like his; your overcoat is like his; your scarf is like his, and even your attempted mustache is like his."

"I feel sorry for the gentleman, if he resembles me."

"Well, my conclusion is that you were in a craps game with him last night and won all his clothes."

"Even so, I couldn't very well have appropriated his mustache."

Some of our blessings come to us in disguise but out troubles seldom attempt to conceal their identity.

AMUSEMENTS

What a riot! Laughs by the score, pretty girls galore and thrills that'll make your hair stand directly on end are seen in Wallace Beery's new comedy vehicle, "Casey at the Bat" which came to the Met theater yesterday.

Beery is once more the same lovable sap he was in "Behind the Front" and "We're in the Navy Now," but this time he wears the uniform of a baseball batter. The action starts in a small town near New York. Ford Sterling delineates a scout for the Giants; ZaSu Pitts, the village milliner and Sterling Holloway, a newcomer on the screen, the villainous village barber.

Both men love the same girl, with Beery holding the inside track, until the scout discovers that Wallie's a whole team in himself and signs him to a Giant contract. He becomes one of the famous figures of Gotham and is idolized by an entire nation but at the pinnacle of his colorful career, the frivolous life he leads proves his undoing. Casey achieves a dramatic failure as great as was his success until—Fate steps in.

"Casey at the Bat," suggested by Ernest Thayer's famous poem, was written directly for the screen by Hector Turnbull. Paramount producer. Monte Brice directed.

Stone Formation
Stones are fragments of rocks, while soil represents the complete disintegration of rock by the processes of weathering. Hence, stones are not formed by soil. However, the stones and the soil of a certain region may have the same rock as ancestors. Stones are transported from one place to another by water, in which case the soil and the stones bear no relation to each other.

MEXICAN NAMES SPRINKLE NEWS

Average American Knows Little of the 28 States of Southern Neighbor.

Names of Mexican states most difficult for Americans and their approximate pronunciations are: Chihuahua, che-wah-wah; Coahuila, ko-a-wee-la; Zacatecas, sa-ka-tay-kas; Jalisco, ha-lees-ko; Michoacan, me-cho-a-kan; Guerrero, gay-ray-ro; Oaxaca, wa-ha-kah; Guanajuato, gwa-na-hwa-to; Queretaro, kay-ray-tah-ro; Tlaxcala, tals-kah-lah.

Washington—Dispatches from Mexico have been sprinkled with names of the United States of Mexico: Jalisco, Durango, Tabasco and others.

Mexico has 28 states. Does the average American know whether Chiapas is on the Pacific or Atlantic coast; whether Nayarit is in the north, central or south in Mexico; if Aguascalientes is a large state or a small one; or if Campeche is in the east or west in Mexico?

"Name the two territories of Mexico," is a question on which many Americans, who can name the 48 American state capitals and the Canadian provinces, would fail," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"Lower California, dry, arid, mountainous and sparsely populated, is one Mexican territory not yet granted status of a state. Fifteen hundred miles away from Lower California lies Mexico's other territory, Quintana Roo, farthest south and farthest east.

As Wide as It Is Long.

"It is common to think of Mexico as a great horn sprouting south from southwest United States. The position of the two Mexican territories punctures this geographic myth. Mexico is not a thin nation. It is just as wide as it is long. While its westernmost city is Tijuana, over the international line from San Diego, Calif., the outermost point of the Yucatan peninsula lies as far east as Indianapolis.

"The United States has one smaller state than Mexico's smallest, Rhode Island is 300 square miles smaller than Tlaxcala, which lies 50 miles east of Mexico City. Colima, a state on the Pacific coast of Mexico directly west of the capital, measures less than Delaware. But the largest state of Mexico, Chihuahua, across the border from New Mexico, is much smaller than the American giant, Texas. It approximates Oregon or Illinois and Indiana taken together.

"The states of Mexico were originally laid out to coincide roughly with the areas occupied by the Indian tribes which the Spaniards conquered. Then the conquerors apportioned the districts among themselves. Thus Hernando Cortes was 'Marques del Valle' of Oaxaca. As 'Marques' he laid waste the Zapotec Indians' chief town, built a new city on the same site and named it Antequera, after a town of Spain near Malaga. When Mexico won its independence from Spain, the city resumed its old Zapotec name, Huastlacac (modified in Spanish to Oaxaca) and the state took the same title. This is a story repeated with variations many times in Mexico. Practically all the states have resumed their Indian names. There are exceptions, such as the states of Vera Cruz, San Luis Potosi, Guanajuato and Nuevo Leon.

Although the ancient Aztecs, Zapotecs, and Mayas are responsible for the boundaries of modern states of Mexico, the borders often outline definite geographic units. There is a classification handy for Mexican states which our republic cannot use to advantage. In Mexico there are low states, high states and higher states. The low states are the eastern seaboard units from north to south, Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Vera Cruz and Tabasco. The Yucatan peninsula group of Campeche, Yucatan and Quintana Roo also hugs sea level. Pacific coastal states are, for the most part, low states, too; but not so low as east-coast states; Sonora, Sinaloa, Nayarit, Colima, Michoacan, Guerrero, Oaxaca and Chiapas. Then come the high states, that is, those which are 3,000 feet above sea level, Chihuahua, Coahuila and Durango, all of which lie in the Rio Grande basin between the wide open arms of the mountain ranges that border the famous valley of Mexico.

Most Populous and Richest.

"South of Durango are the higher states, and it may be added, the smaller, and the most populous and the richest states of Mexico. The average elevation of 11 states and the federal district is more than a mile above sea level. Orizaba peak, 125 miles southeast of Mexico City, is the key pin of a gigantic pair of dividers opened to a 60-degree angle. Each arm of the dividers is a mountain range, the left arm connecting with the Rocky mountains and the right losing itself at Monterey.

"Between the arms spreads the fertile mile-high or higher region of blue lakes and fruitful valleys, elevated enough to have an equable climate. Just as the mountain ranges converge on Orizaba, so the trade routes converge on Mexico City. Like Washington, the Mexican capital has been isolated within a small 'Distrito Federal,' administered by the national congress. But there is this difference, Mexico City is the New York as well as the Washington of Mexico. Its population of 906,000 nearly equals that of the most populous of the nation's provinces.

"Just as the United States has, in the state of Washington, a commonwealth named for the hero of its revolution, so Mexico has honored the father of its freedom from Spain. Padre Hidalgo was a parish priest in Dolores, in the state of Guanajuato, until he led the revolution in 1810. Dolores has now become Dolores Hidalgo. A nearby area of 8,600 square miles of the valley of Mexico has been carved out to make the state of Hidalgo. South of Mexico City another relatively small state, Morelos, honors another hero of Mexico's revolution.

"Difficulties of pronunciation are a barrier to a development of American interest in Mexico. A man confronted with the name 'Oaxaca' is inclined to let the whole subject drop!

"Mexican names are difficult. In Mexico there are far more names in honor of the Indian than in the United States. Aztecs and Mayas loved 't' and 'c' and 'x.' Of course they had no written language intelligible today. So the crackling Indian names must be expressed in soft Spanish. In the United States we have anglicized the Spanish-Indian names. The name of Mexico and its capital serves as a good example. The central shrine of the Aztec capital was dedicated to Mexitli, the war god. Spaniards revamped the name to Mexico, pronounced meh-he-ko. As far north as central Texas is a town Mexia, pronounced 'ma-he-a,' but Mexico, Mo., has the hard Anglo-Saxon 'x.'

Weddings and Funerals Public Affairs in Brazil

Rio de Janeiro.—Weddings and funerals are public functions in Brazil and any citizen of the republic is privileged to attend, whether services are held in a private residence or a church.

If a ceremony is held in a home, the home thereby becomes a public court as the scene of a public function. Officials arrive before the scheduled hour, and open all the doors and windows, indicating that the scene of the ceremony is open to the public.

A long procession from the home of the bride to the church is an important part of a fashionable wedding in Rio. The longer the procession, the wealthier the bride, or groom, or both. Elaborate funeral corteges are also often seen in the streets.

Manager's Quick Work Stops Theater Panic

Lawrence, Mass. — Cool-headedness of Manager George Woods prevented a wild stampede of some 300 persons present in the Victoria theater, when an excited passerby dashed into the theater to shout that the building next door was in flames.

Manager Wood, who happened to be near the stage at the time, stepped forward and calmly assured the patrons that there was no cause for fear, advising that they leave the house quietly and slowly, which they did.

The flames spread rapidly, unchecked for some minutes when a first alarm, apparently sounded from several different boxes in the district almost simultaneously, failed to register in the fire alarm headquarters.

Study "Voltmeter" Is Applied to Pupils

Philadelphia.—Public school efficiency is now tested in Philadelphia just as a radio battery is tested, with a voltmeter.

The voltmeter of the public schools is a division of educational research, headed by Philip A. Boyer.

It has just completed a survey of the arithmetic course and found that, as Mr. Boyer words it, "a lesson which concerns the measurements of a dress on which a girl is working, the measurements of the ingredients in a cake, or something else concrete and familiar, loses the monotony of one which deals in textbook figures and unfamiliar situations."

Virginia Recovers Rare Colonial Book

Elizabeth, N. J.—A book of records, said to contain wills of relatives of George Washington and proceedings of the Stafford County Orphans' court of Virginia during Revolutionary days, was turned over to H. R. McIlwaine, librarian of Virginia, by the Union County Historical society.

The book was taken from the Stafford county courthouse in 1862 by I. S. Haskins, a member of the Union forces, which occupied the building during a Civil war battle there. It reached the society after passing through the hands of several persons.

Communication with Governor Byrd of Virginia, after the society decided to return the relic, caused Mr. McIlwaine to make the trip because he was "afraid the book might be lost if sent by mail or express."

Among the wills in the book were those of John and Henry Washington, the degree of whose relationship to the first President was not learned.

The Acceptable Last Hope

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

"ISNT there someone else you can think of—a sort of last hope?" Daisy McNair suggested.

"I've asked every man I know," Helen Proctor said ruefully. She paused a minute and then ventured: "But maybe you could ask a last hope for me."

The much-heralded Junior Prom at Tilden college for women was just a week off. But Helen wished that junior proms had never been invented. Young and rather shy, she had not liked the idea of asking an escort, but had finally invited Harold Granger, a childhood friend. She had promptly received word from Harold that as he had already accepted an invitation from another girl in another college for a dance on the same night, he could not accept. Then she had written to Walter Drew, who adored Helen's sister, and Walter, not being at all interested in little Helen, had fabricated an excuse. Then she asked Ned Stevens whom she had met the summer before and a letter had soon followed from Ned's mother saying that as Ned had the measles he would not be able to come. There were no more men in Helen's list of acquaintances—not even a last hope.

Daisy thought a minute or two as they continued their way down one of the campus walks. "There's Bob King—Tom's buddy—I could ask him for you—he'd come, but dear me, he's impossible. Last hope just about describes him—perfectly enormous and doesn't give a snap for girls and dances like a walrus. He'd come because Tom would make him."

So it was agreed that Bob should be asked and Bob would motor out from the city with Tom. Bob, Tom told Daisy, had objected but had finally yielded as an act of supreme friendship toward Tom.

The Prom was booked for Friday night. Wednesday afternoon Helen received a special delivery letter from her first hope, Harold Granger.

"Harold is coming after all," she cried in joy to Daisy. "The other girl and he had a scrap—so you can just let that Bob person know we won't need him after all."

Then on the morning mail, next day, came a letter from Walter Drew. He had decided to come, he said, and was now on his way.

Friday afternoon Helen went to the railroad station to meet Harold Granger on the train she had told him to take—and as she stood there looking searchingly down the platform, up came the youthful-visaged Ned Stevens.

"Well, I came anyway," he said. "I see you got mother's telegram—and were expecting me—I was afraid you mightn't get it in time. You see it wasn't measles after all—just a cold—and I'm all right now and mother said that I'd better come as she was afraid you'd be so disappointed and would miss all the fun without a man."

But the artless Ned got no further for just at this juncture up stepped Harold Granger with breezy nonchalance. He and Helen greeted each other with great cordiality and then followed an awkward introduction.

Helen showed the boys about the campus, and they went at four o'clock for tea at the Blue Heron, and Helen thrilled at the thought that she was sitting there with two escorts. It did give one an air of great popularity. And just as she was enjoying this situation so rare for her, there appeared a slender, dignified, young man in the doorway of the little tea-room. He looked around and then came toward her. It was Walter Drew. He had arrived by motor, looked for her everywhere and had finally been told that she might be at the Blue Heron.

Helen was standing almost hidden by her bodyguard of three black-clad men when Daisy McNair with Tom and the Last Hope appeared. They caught a glimpse of Helen and came sailing over to her. Daisy explained to Helen in an aside that the message had never reached Tom and so he had brought Bob as he had promised.

Daisy shook hands with this fourth and tallest of her escorts and wondered how anyone could ever have thought him ungainly or dubbed him a last hope.

By all means Helen was the belle of the ball that night—if there are such things at modern college dances. The story of her enormous popularity spread until everyone was talking about this wonderful girl who had four escorts. They didn't know that Harold had come merely because he had had a quarrel with the girl he loved and wanted to make her jealous, that Walter had come because Helen's sister had promised to marry him if he did, that Ned had come because his mother wanted him to and had promised him a new car if he would, and that Bob had come because of his devotion for his buddy, Tom.

But Bob forgot his motive in coming before he had finished the first dance with Helen. Before the evening was over he was in love with her and madly jealous of the other three men who claimed a share of her charming company—of every man in fact whose arms encircled her when she danced.

When Tom and Bob motored back to the city late the next afternoon Bob had received a timid, fluttering acceptance to his hasty proposal.

HEALTH

Of School Children Is Periled By Faulty Air.

New York, March 7.—It is not strange that nearly one-fifth of the school children of the United States are always home with colds in the winter time; it is strange that there are not more sick children, declared G. E. Otis, heating and ventilating engineer in an address here on school equipment.

"There are five different strata of temperature in the ordinary school room with radiator heat and windows partly open in the effort to get a supply of fresh air," said Mr. Otis. "Where the cold outer air pours in, it may be zero. Close to the radiator the thermometer will read 90 degrees. Temperature at the floor is 60 or less. Near the ceiling the temperature will be around 80 degrees. In some of the best parts of the room the temperature will be at the correct level of 70 degrees.

"Exposed to this variety of temperature will be about forty children, dressed differently, most of them with too many clothes on and some not dressed warmly enough. Their feet will be cold and their heads hot. Those near the heaters will be perspiring even though a cascade of chill air is falling on their heads.

"In an ordinary living room in a residence, this sort of condition does not make much difference because the people will always seek the comfortable parts of the room. But a school room has to hold forty children who have to stay in it where they are put. When it is generally understood that heating and ventilation are inseparably linked together and that their proper control has to be done scientifically, a long step will be made toward the health of school children and many lives will be saved."

HUSBAND OF RICH BRIDE SUCCUMBS

Sandusky, March 7.—Harry Ohler, aged 38, of Fostoria, is dead here today, supposedly as a result of taking an overdose of headache powders.

Ohler was found dead this morning by his bride of only a few weeks, Mrs. Annabelle Ohler. Mrs. Ohler was formerly Miss Annabelle Whitworth, said to be Sandusky's wealthiest girl.

The couple had planned to move to Fostoria by truck today.

CAPTAIN HELD DEAD, DIES 10 YEARS LATER

Prosperous Business In Oklahoma Built By Seaman Thought Drowned.

Belleville, Ont., March 7.—A letter received today notified relatives of Captain John Wesley Smith that their kinsman had not been drowned 10 years ago as they had believed, but had escaped when his vessel foundered, had gone to Harrah, Okla., and built up a prosperous business. The letter announced the death of Captain Smith Feb. 22, this year.

Ben Wilson, master of the Masonic lodge at Harrah, who wrote the letter, was quoted as having said that Captain Smith had told him "some of the secrets of his life" and had asked him to "notify the folks back home when he died."

Captain Smith was believed to have been drowned with 11 others when the coal schooner George Marsh, of which he was skipper, foundered off Pigeon Island, near Kingston, Ont., Aug. 8, 1917.

The only reason given by Captain Smith's concealment of his identity for 10 years was that he wanted to start life anew.

DUSTING ORCHARD GIVES CLEAN FRUIT

Dusting experiments in apple orchards in comparison with spraying, conducted by the horticultural department of the Ohio Experiment Station in 1926, gave very satisfactory results.

The highest production of apples entirely free from scab was 98.8 per cent, obtained on a sprayed plot. However, the best dusted plot gave 97.5 per cent of fruit wholly free from scab. This plot was treated with a 90-10 sulfur-arsenate of lead dust, home-mixed. Only one plot among the several that were dusted produced below 90 per cent of sound fruit; this one exception gave 84 per cent of apples free from disease.

The untreated or "check" plot left for comparison with sprayed and dusted plots gave but 2 per cent of fruit free from scab. All the untreated fruit was badly discolored with sooty blotch, while the sprayed and dusted fruit was entirely free from this disease.

There was very little evidence of insect injury of any kind on the fruit from sprayed and dusted plots. Over 70 per cent of the untreated fruit was lying on the ground at the time of apple harvest, from effects of insect infestation.

F. H. Ballou, who directed these experiments, is confident that thorough work in application of dusts is just as essential as thorough work in spraying, and that diseases and insects may be successfully combated.

LATE DR. MIESSE IS CALLED

Mrs. Caroline Miesse, aged 87, widow of the late Dr. Gabriel Miesse, died early this morning at the City Hospital following an illness of pneumonia.

She is survived by two grandsons, Leon and Ralph Miesse, of this city and Harry K. Beck, a nephew.

Funeral services will be held from the home at 736 East Main street, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Rev. T. B. Roberts, officiating. Burial will be made at Forest Rose cemetery.—Lancaster Eagle.

CLEWS TO SHOOTING FOUND IN HOSPITAL

Men Treated In Lancaster Sunday May Have Figured In Firing Here, Is Police Theory.

Columbus, March 8.—A clew that may throw more light on the mysterious shooting which occurred in front of the home of M. M. Pugh, 187 South Sixth street, was found yesterday at Lancaster hospital, where two men were treated Sunday for gunshot wounds.

The two men, Lee Bussert, of near Royalton and Joe Wiseman, of Lancaster, told hospital attendants they were wounded when their auto was fired upon in Columbus "near Grant Hospital."

They said the auto in which they were riding, owned by Wiseman, was sideswiped by another car, occupants of which fired upon them. Wiseman was treated for a scalp wound and Bussert for a wounded finger.

According to a story of the shooting told to Columbus police yesterday, a large auto passed the Pugh home and a pistol shot followed a woman's scream and an argument in which masculine voices were heard, from the car. The auto disappeared.

Crash of a bullet through the front door of the Pugh home awakened Mrs. Mary Collins and her blind husband, John, who occupy a front room downstairs. Martin Layden, 183 South Sixth street, said he also saw the machine and heard the shot. Police have the bullet which was fired through the glass of the door.

CONFESSIONS IN BEER CONSPIRACY

Cleveland, March 7.—Confessions from a number of persons involved in the Ohio-Pennsylvania "beer trust" alleged to have done a $4,000,000 business in the two states, are in the hands of District Attorney A. E. Bernstein and will be turned over to the federal grand jury, the government prosecutor said today.

Bernstein would not elaborate on this statement, but he said he expects the grand jury to return the first of approximately 70 true bills within the next ten days. The "beer trust" is expected to involve at least 200 persons.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES ARE HELD NIGHTLY

A large crowd attended the revival at the Evangelical church Tuesday evening to her Miss Banning, the evangelist.

I Samuel 15:14. "And Samuel said what meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?" When Saul was a little man in his own mind and estimation God sent Samuel to anoint him king, but when he disobeyed the Lord God sent the same Samuel down to dethrone Saul from being king. God came to this man Saul in as plain a vision as any man could possibly have. He said, "Go and smite the Amalekites and utterly destroy all they have." Saul seemed to disobey or misunderstand the heavenly vision. They destroyed the Amalekites. Then he came to Saul and said he had kept the command of the Almighty. Samuel knew he had not and looked at Saul. Then Samuel said, "What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?" He had spared Agag.

Then he tried to blame it on the people. How cowardly for a king to lay on his subjects a matter like that. If you have not not all the atonement provides in the way of experience who are you blaming it on?

Samuel asked Saul, "Hath the Lord as great delight in meat offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams." Has God told you to quit some habit and you are at it yet—has He called you to some work and you said "I can't?" I can't means "I won't," but the Bible says "All things are possible."

Suppose we let Samuel stand for the Holy Ghost, let Saul stand for you and Agag stand for carnality and we will let the bleating sheep and lowing oxen stand for the outbreaks of carnality (pet sins we will call them). Some people are saved but have never been to Jesus for the second touch and they have in them that very carnality and they have at times serious downfalls. Carnality is a thing that came from hell, it going back to hell and it has been put in you because Adam fell, but God wants to take it out and make you free.

What are some of the pet sins which Christian people seem to maintain in their lives? One is anger or temper, another jealousy and envy, sensitiveness, had habits, unforgiveness and many others. But God can take out carnality and give you the Holy Spirit and He will be your all in all.

FASHION SHOW FOR LARGER WOMEN

To be held at Friedman's store Monday, March 14.

In keeping with the modern trend for specialization this well known firm who have realized the importance of taking care of the apparel requirements of women who wear the larger sizes, have made special arrangements to have the Fashion Advisers from New York—who are themselves large women and who will give a Fashion Show for larger women exclusively, in the Ready-to-Wear Department.

The newest Spring and Summer modes including Coats, Dresses and Millinery for larger women will be worn by the New York models. A most interesting feature of this event will be the fact that the ladies of this community will have the services gratis, of the Fashion experts in charge of the show who will give personal advice in the selection of Coats and Dresses that will be most becoming to the individual requirements of each customer.

A great deal of interest has already been aroused, as it has been rumored that the ladies from New York are bringing with them some of the very latest models.

There will be special models for short women who wear larger sizes in addition to those modes that will be shown for the taller woman.

The store wishes to state that all women who wear sizes 38 to 54 are cordially invited to attend this event; those who wish to avoid the crowds and receive the careful attention of the ladies in charge are advised to come in the morning.

CHARTER MEMBERS ENTERTAINED

At a Social Evening Session Held by the Monday Club Last Monday Evening.

A very enjoyable event was the social meeting of the Monday club which was held Monday evening, March 7, in the social rooms of the Presbyterian church, with the president, Mrs. E. F. Anderson, presiding.

The program was opened by the singing of the club song—"America, the Beautiful." This was followed by a number by the Monday club quartet entitled, "The Wood Nymphs," by Rohr. This quartet, which is composed of Mrs. Ray Reid, Miss Estelle Grimes, Mrs. Christian Schwarz and Mrs. James Moffitt, with Miss Anna Schleyer as accompanist, has been very popular thruout the year with the Monday club and other organizations.

The president then introduced the charter members of the Monday club to whom she gives credit for the success and enduring life of the Monday club which is now in its thirty-seventh year.

The five charter members present and who were guests of the club for the evening were Miss Alice Pedrick, Mrs. Fred Fickardt, Miss Elizabeth Renick, Mrs. Harry Lewis and Miss Nelle Weldon. Mrs. Howard Jones, another, was out of town.

Miss Renick, is a few well chosen remarks then told of the formation of the club and its purpose to bring together women interested in literary, artistic, scientific, philanthropic and industrial pursuits with a view of rendering them helpful to one another and to society.

The members feel that the Monday club has accomplished and is accomplishing this purpose.

Miss Alice Pedrick in her inimitable way told of the adoption of the constitution of the first course of study, of the first social meeting and the introduction of a Lyceum course for Circleville by the Monday club. Her talk was full of witty comments as well as club history.

Miss Nelle Weldon, also one of the "pioneers" of the club gave some recollections of the early activities of the club and made some comparisons as to the size and the energy shown by the club of 1890 and the club of 1927. She is firm in her belief that the Monday club has been and always will be a force for good in our city.

Mrs. Ray Reid then favored the club with a vocal solo, "Reveries to You" by Oley Speaks, which was well received by the club.

A play, which is burlesque of Shakespeare was then given. The subject being "The Ladies Speak at Last." Miss Sadie Brunner played the part of Ophelia; Mrs. Harry Lewis the part of Lady MacBeth; Mrs. Even Reichelderfer the part of Portia and Mrs. William Ulm the part of Juliet. This play is a relic, having been published in 1890 and was once again by the charter members of the club. Old-fashioned costumes helped to make it a success.

This was followed by two vocal numbers by Miss Helen Marion, accompanied by Miss Abbe Clarke. These were entitled; "That Lass O'Kalleen" and "The Little Damsel." The applause she received attests her popularity as a soloist.

Mrs. W. W. Robinson then read a story of which she is the author and which is in the hands of a publisher now. The story merited the undivided attention which it received.

The quartet then gave another number, "The Sweetest Flower That Blows," which was enjoyed by all and closed the program.

The president then announced that an invitation has been extended to the Monday club by the Federated clubs of Columbus, Ohio, to attend the ceremonies of the laying of the cornerstone of the new Women's building, Wednesday, March 9.

The out of town guests present were Mrs. Anna Depew, of Huntington, West Virginia, who is the guest of Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, Mrs. Frank Taylor, of Cleveland, Montana, who is the guest of Miss Anna Florence, and Mrs. F. J. Pond of Mont Clair, New Jersey, who is the guest of her sister, Miss Carrie Olds.

The committee in charge served delicious refreshments during the social hour. This committee deserves a great deal of credit for making such a pleasant evening for all.

Thought Rules

The secret of kindly speech is kindly thinking. Inevitably men become like the things they think about. The man who fails indicates that he has not been thinking of what he was doing. Think peace and you speak peace; think war and you talk war; think carelessly and speech is clumsy. We have this tremendous power in our keeping, and no one else is to blame for what we say.

Prepared to "Smoke"

An old Dutchman, Mynheer Van Klaes, had smoking materials buried with him. It is stated that "at his feet were placed a bladder of the finest Dutch golden-leaf and a packet of caporal; by his sides were laid his china-bowled pipe and a box of matches, and steel, flint and tinder."

HELD CLASS MEETING

COOLIDGE SEEKS NAVAL CURTAILMENT

AMERICA, ENGLAND, JAPAN TO HOLD MARINE POWER SESSION

'Tis a Maneuver To Force the Recalcitrant Nations, Italy and France, To Join In General Parley At Geneva and Limit Building of Submarines, Cruisers and Destroyers—Definite Proposals Have Been Made By the United States.

President Coolidge is negotiating with Great Britain and Japan for a three-power naval treaty to limit submarines, destroyers, fast cruisers and other ships of war left untouched by the last Washington conference it was announced at the White House Tuesday.

Undaunted by the refusal of France and Italy to enter a five-power agreement for naval curtailment, the Coolidge administration has been conducting "informal inquiries" with both Great Britain and Japan, the nations with whom America is bound in the five-five-three ratio pact.

The responses from the two naval powers are understood to be favorable so far.

The situation among the three countries is being studied carefully to determine whether or not any fruitful disarmament results could be achieved even if France and Italy stay out, it was said.

If it appears to be feasible, the United States, Great Britain and Japan will put their feet under the same conference table at Geneva this month during the concurrent sessions of the League of Nations general disarmament parley.

Despite President Coolidge's well-known desire to strip the world of what he regards to be the expense and menace of naval armaments, his determination to arrange a three-power pact stuck official Washington with surprise.

The purpose of President Coolidge's latest move, it is believed, is to maneuver France and Italy onto the conference. He is understood to believe that France is responsible for the hopeless deadlock to which the Geneva arms parley is headed. She has refused to ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt pact.

What is regarded in official administration circles to be France's "obduracy" is believed to have kept the United States out of the World Court.

France and Italy probably will be invited to send observers.

The Washington government probably will not attempt to present any limitation formula in its invitation to Great Britain and Japan. The whole question of what steps are possible to the three major naval powers to curb their own building programs reluctance to join in five-power negotiations almost certainly will be left to the Geneva meeting itself.

It Great Britain accepts, as London advices indicate, the greatest stumbling block in the road of the three-power discussion will be removed.

Heretofore Great Britain frequently has indicated that she could accept no limitation of antisubmarine craft if her continental neighbors refused to limit submarine construction.

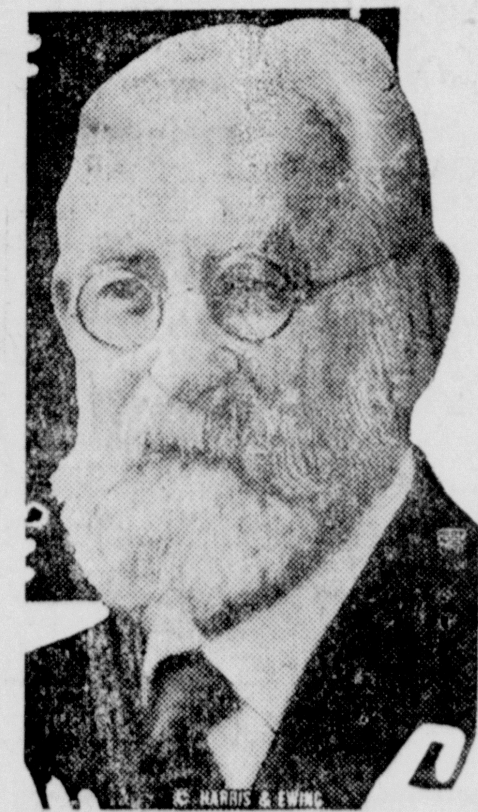

Japan's only question is accepting the five-power plan was as to extension of the 5-5-3 ratio to other than capital ships and airplane carriers.

The American invitation said the United States was disposed to follow that course, but the Washington government clearly has indicated its recognition at even the extension of maximum tonnage limitations by classes of ships to type not provided for in the Washington treaty must be a flexible agreement.

Officials believe the proposed conference would evolve a plan to set tonnage limitation for cruisers, destroyers and submarines at a maximum figure, but with a requirement for reexamination of these figures at intervals with a view to revision upward if naval building outside the treaty group of powers makes that expedient.

"Seedy" Looking Man

The term "seedy" as applied to a person who is somewhat shabby really refers to a plant, the appearance of which is somewhat disorderly owing to the fact that it has gone to seed when all the strength has been exhausted in the process of seed development. The term "seedy" is especially applied to one whose clothing is unorderly and soiled and whose hair may be in need of brushing or cutting.

Aerial Doctors

The continent of Australia has been divided into circular districts, each with a radius of 200 miles, to be covered by flying doctors. In this way a physician in government employ may be summoned to any place in the whole country where he may be needed and reach there in a comparatively short time.

We might run the paper better than the editor does if we didn't have to worry about payrolls and paper bills.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEETING.

Fifty-eight men gathered at the chamber of commerce rooms Tuesday evening to hear Dr. J. B. May make an address before a joint meeting of the chamber of commerce and the Pickaway County Medical Society.

The doctor's talk was interesting. He spoke on the intestinal tract and the conditions that arise when disease attack this portion of your digestive machinery. He also spoke of the new society, The Health and Educational society of New York City. Dr. May said that after a person reaches the age of forty, they ought to have sense enough to get along without a doctor. Every person ought to study their own self sufficiently to know what their body needs, without consulting a doctor every time they have an ache or pain.

Water Hazard

Golfers have troubles in the Sunny South regardless of the weather. The former president of the California Golf association had his mashie shot caught on the first bounce by a seagull which flew out to sea and dropped it far from shore. That's a water hazard.

THOUSANDS RUSHING TO A NEW GOLD CAMP

Scenes of '49 Reenacted, Desert Rats, Half Breeds, Wild Women in the Rush.

Once more Nevada is in the grip of a gold rush. Whether or not it will produce the glamor and the treasure of old California, the Comstock, the Klondike or Goldfield remains to be seen. It got off a whooping start and is gathering momentum every hour.

One flank of it has lashed against Tonopah, filling the street with automobiles of every make, streaked with alkali dust. A mixed breed of men mill thru the hotel lobbies at Tonopah Nevada, hurrying clerks in white collars, big-hatted and booted prospectors with square jaws, the slim, trim gen try of the gaming table. Camp followers, both men and women, smiling, overornate, bland, are there, too, in force.

The Malapai, as the Indians call the "bad lands" of the lower Nevada desert, again is witnessing the rush of man, mule, truck and motor car apexing toward the staked lands of Weepah, 40 miles away, where Frank Horton, who lost a fortune as a low-grade oreman at Goldfield and won it back again, has come upon "dirt" that assays thousands of dollars to the ton. His son, a bronzed desert prospector, despite his youth, made the find. He kept his own counsel, but the news leaked out and the rush was on.

The Malapai has been the setting for hectic gold rushes, but the Weepah boom bids fair to be the greatest of them all. Horton, overnight, finds himself to be famous. Before setting out from his hotel for his claim at Weepah, Horton displayed hundreds of telegrams, all of them asking for a concession on the Weepah claims and many offering large sums of money.

One message, from a New York manufacturer, was worthy of note:

"If you are the Frank Horton I know, you can have all the money you want."

The manufacturer was one of those who paid a million for Horton's Daisy Mine in Goldfield, and never realized a cent on the investment.

"That man is sincere, I know," Horton said, "but I do not think I will have to call on him."

Then in retrospect the old prospector said, "When I was starving and had a low grade mine for sale, I could not get one single engineer to say a good word for the property."

The new and old mix incongruously in this rush into the sage lands. The prospector's mule brays at hte trim sport roadster automobile, both loaded down with bulging grubsacks. Trucks carrying household goods towering over the drivers' heads.

Many of the roads have to be broken thru by the wagons, the trucks and the motor cars, as worked roads are few and far between. But it is a clear field and a straight shoot from Tonopah, last outfitting station to Weepah where the gold and the glamour and the excitement await.

Has a Long Snout

The opossum is the only marsupial found in the United States. The long, hairless, prehensile tail, the naked ears, piglike snout, and the long, coarse hair, together with the widely spread toes, are the chief distinguishing marks, says Nature Magazine. These animals love the vicinity of water and are most numerous in swamps and bottom land bordering streams. The average length is about thirty inches.
